

Mátyás Bánhegyi (PhD) specialises in Canada-related teaching material development, intercultural aspects of translation, methodology of English as a foreign language, translation studies and English for specific purposes.

He currently teaches English as a foreign language and English for specific purposes (including business English) at Budapest Business School University of Applied Sciences. Formerly he taught at Károli Gáspár University of the Reformed Church in Hungary, where he gave methodology seminars (including teaching /Canadian/ culture through language), translation studies seminars, language practice seminars (both at BA and MA levels), writing skills seminars and exam preparation seminars.

Since 2006 he has been one of the founding members of the “Canada in the English Classroom” international research group. ICCS ranked one of the group’s publications entitled Canadian-German-Hungarian Reader as one of the four most innovative projects in Canadian Studies in the academic year 2010-2011.

For a shorted period, Mátyás Bánhegyi also worked as Acting Education and Cultural Relations Officer, education expert and Study in Canada! coordinator at the Canadian Embassy, Hungary.

His research areas include teaching culture through language (Canadian Studies), translation studies (communication and translation, translation of political texts, translation theory, literary translation, technical translation) and methodology of English as a foreign language (at all levels of education).

Apart from being a scholar, he is also a practising technical translator.

For more information, a complete list of his publications and his CV, and please visit his website at: <https://sites.google.com/site/matyasbanhegyi/english>.